Description

Geoffrey de Lanceau is a knight, the son of the man who once ruled Wode. His noble sire died, however, branded as a traitor. But never will Geoffrey believe his father betrayed their king, and swears vengeance against the man who brought his sire down in a siege to take over Wode. Lady Elizabeth Brackendale dreamed of marrying for love, but is promised by her father to a lecherous old baron. Then she is abducted and held for ransom by a scarred, tormented rogue who turns out to be the very knight who has sworn vengeance against her father. The threads of deception sewn eighteen years ago bind the past and present. Only by Geoffrey and Elizabeth championing their forbidden love can the truth - and the lies — be revealed about a knight's vengeance.

Insightful reviews

Petula: 4**** Very good historical romance. Geoffrey our hero kidnaps Elizabeth to force her father to give up The estate his father once held. He is determined to prove his father was not a traitor. There is someone around who can't let that happen. Elizabeth is the innocent caught in the middle trying to do the right thing for everyone. An enjoyable love story with plenty of twists and turns to keep the pages turning. I look forward to reading the next one in the series.

Readitnweep: 3-1/2 stars! I really enjoyed this. Great plot twists and well crafted characters. Geoffrey's father was branded a traitor at his death, Geoffrey's trying to clear his name but Elizabeth is marrying the older baron who Geoffrey believes responsible, on her father's order. Well written and I'd love to find more stories by this author.

Elis Madison: As a child, Geoffrey de Lanceau witnessed his father's murder, and he has sworn to have vengeance against the man responsible. His father had been falsely branded a traitor, and Lord Brackendale was sent to bring him down. As a reward for his deed, Lord B was granted the de L estates, including Wode.

Years later, Geoffrey has distinguished himself in the Crusades. As a reward, Richard I granted him a run-down estate, but he still wants what should have been his. To get it, he abducts Elizabeth, Lord B's cherished daughter, a beauty who was to wed an ally of her father's. Now, evidently Lord B doesn't cherish his daughter enough to give a rat's butt about the rumors that his friend is cruel and that he murdered at least one of his previous wives, but Geoff doesn't take that as an indication that the old man will refuse his ransom. He wants all his estates back—and for Lord B to meet him in battle.

Elizabeth was pushed down the stairs and injured by one of Geoffrey's men, then made to lie face-down in the belly of a wagon with men's boots pinning her down by her hair, then separated from her maidservant. De L took a beloved brooch that had been given to her by her mother on the day her mother died—and he refuses to return it—in fact she sees it pinned to his doxy's dress. And the only other things she has that are hers—her clothing—he takes and gives away and forces her to dress like a whore. And he forced a kiss on her. And then this asswad has the nerve to ask her how she feels ill-treated. And he punishes her when she lashes back the only way she can—with words.

I really hate it when the heroine “can’t help herself” and turns into a tub of lustful jelly when a guy like this breathes in her ear. I like to respect the heroine and when she has so little regard for herself that she’d bang the guy who has treated her like crap and who plans to murder her father, I can’t. So a giant “EW” to the fact that, OF COURSE, Liz is quickly and willingly divested of her virtue (view spoiler). Seriously, if she’s as spirited as we’re supposed to think, how does she go all puddly so easily?

Villains galore in this one. I’ll give it 3.5—the added .5 because it’s Medieval.
