Description

How do you bake an American pie?

Preheat the world until fiery hot with a hunger and thirst to be free. Now find a giant melting pot on the shores of a great shining sea.

From the bestselling author of Bear Snores On comes a remarkable recipe for America.

Including a dash of purple mountain majesties, cupfuls of courage, and a pinch of liberty, this beautifully illustrated combination of ingredients yields an irresistible treat that promises plenty of servings for children everywhere.

Insightful reviews

Sandy Brehl: Both the illustrations and the text contain details, references, and vocabulary suitable for curricular discussions at upper ages. The tightly metered and rhymed text has a lilting pace. The humorous images of the dog and cat throughout and splashes of familiar words and elements make it an effective read aloud for young children, too.

Naomi: Karma Wilson is very quickly becoming one of my favorite children's authors. Loved this book although I do agree with other reviewers that the majority of the kids in its age range won't get it. Parents would need to teach to it.

Terrie Wolf: Perfectly Delicious For All Ages! Of course, this is a work intended for children K - 3rd Grade, but the verse is lyrical and the "pictures" are enough to make your mouth water. This is not your average book about Independence Day. Rather, it is a lovely little offering about the important things like freedom, tradition, and respect. The best part of all is these ingredients all come together via the best apple pie recipe ever! A snippet:

"Preheat the world until fiery hot with a hunger and thirst to be free. Now find a giant melting pot on the shores of a great shining sea."

In the beginning I set this book out in honor of the appropriate holiday, but since pie and patriotism are both good things to treat my loved ones to on a "before they realize they missed it" basis, this little treasure now retains permanent residency in our big basket of books. Everyone who knows us also knows story time is a weekly event at our place and it is from the big basket of books we extract - again and again - some of our favorite stories. As new books come to us, some books are eventually donated to our local libraries. We donated a copy of this book too, but not "our copy" and we've found that this book has managed to stand up to, and basically walk all over, the test of time and has been deemed "a keeper" by all who've taken part in our story time since it's first read by our very discerning bunch back when the boys were still boys - not young men at university.

These days I never know who'll pick it up and I always smile when I find one of the neighborhood children sprawled out on the reading rug, as they relish the sweetness of the illustrations while other times I'll find one of our own authors sitting by the window, cup of tea in hand and this book open wide as that same look of delight becomes a part of the day. These are the books and the looks I adore and even if it's just the cat and I who enjoy this read, the imagery never fails to delight, the illustrations remain as beautiful as a fresh-picked Granny Smith, and the message is still valuable, rewarding and sweet on the tongue and dear to my heart.

Jen: enjoyable learn with a Christian element.

Jim: the tale of the US as an ideal, superbly told.

Julie: This was once lovely and extremely imaginative. the youngsters enjoyed the illustrations! we're studying alot approximately patriotic issues and this went alongside great!
