Description

The latest addition to Dutton's Winnie-the-Pooh Collection is big news indeed. These giant-sized, shaped board books celebrate Pooh and Tigger as the superstars they are. Big enough to hug, and featuring sturdy boards and safely rounded edges, they are designed for the youngest devotees of the Bear of Little Brain. With full-image covers, very large type, and up-close illustrations, these striking books will grab preschoolers' attention and hold it.

Insightful reviews

Erik: For Celebrity Deathmatch FINAL

A blustery day. Christopher Robin is on his way to work at the London office of Goldman Sachs. He is troubled about his employers and their crooked business practices, but he has been told to remain silent and he will be rich as long as he does nothing.

Occupy London Protestor: Hey, Chris, wakeup, you're on the wrong side!

Christopher (to himself): Oh, those scraggly protestors, I wish they would just get a job already...I wonder what Pooh would say about all this.

In his mind, Chris re-enters the Hundred Acre Wood.

Christopher: My my, this place has changed.

Occupy Hundred Acre Wood Protestor: Hey Chris!

Chris: You guys are here too?

Pooh: Oh, Hi Chris! Got any honey?

Chris: Pooh, I came to ask you something. Do you think I should testify against Goldman. They're pulling some pretty crooked...

Pooh: Who is "Goldman" Does he make honey? What does "testify" mean? I have a little brain. Got any honey on you?

Dante Alighieri: Hi Chris, remember me?

Chris: Dante, what are you doing here?

Dante: Chris, you're hurting people...

Chris: But only indirectly. I'm just a part of a vast machine, a cog in the...

Pooh: What's a cog? Are they yummy?

Dante: You should know that's no excuse. Didn't I teach you anything?

..."This miserable mode
Maintain the melancholy souls of those
Who lived without infamy or praise....

The heavens expelled them, not to be less fair;
Nor them the nethermore abyss receives,
For glory none the damned would have from them."

Chris: But aren't you just another tyrant? You and the Catholic Church? Pooh never hurts anybody. You put all your enemies in hell!

Dante: Actually, I put most of the Catholic Church in hell too. And that cosmogony was the high tech of its day. Now, I'd be writing string theory or loop quantum gravity. As for my harsh rep as a jailer, you didn't read me very well. Everybody in the divina commedia is exactly where he or she has willed to be. It's their own free choice. That's what I'm trying to tell you, Chris, choose! Before it's too late!

Pooh: Can you eat quantum loop gravity? It sounds yummy.

Chris exits his reverie, rips off his tie and tosses it at the crowd: You know what? Fuck this shit!

A shout goes up from Occupy London! The banners fly. A gorgeous woman leaps from the crowd kisses Chris full on the mouth.

Dante: Bravissimo, Chris. You've taken a step into a wider world. We have a new hope.

Yoda and Obi Wan Kenobi appear alongside Dante. Cue chorus of Ewoks. (You wanted cuddly, furry things I suppose...) Fireworks erupt over London. Millions line up and begin to march on Parliament.

Pooh (tagging along): Hey you Ewoks are cool. You're like a badass version of me. You guys remind me of the Warriors. Y'know "Warr-i-ors come-out-to-play-yay..." Great flick. Gimmie one of those spears. I'm down. No seriously, I get it. Sitting on your ass all day eating honey and espousing Daoism won't change the world...Ahhh, c'mon guys gimmie a spear...Please?

Michael Kneeland: Upon seeing my five-star rating of Winnie-the-Pooh via my Facebook feed, my sister made the following comment: "The originals were depressing. I prefer Disney's cuddly version." I made the following response, which I think sums up my feelings about this wonderful classic children's book:

One day, Pooh and Piglet were walking through the Hundred Acre Wood when they came upon a Facebook Comment. "The originals were depressing," it read. "I prefer Disney's cuddly version."

"Th-th-that's a v-v-very b-b-big statement to m-m-make," Piglet stammered, slightly nervous that there existed somewhere else in the Hundred Acre Wood a Disney version of himself.

Pooh thought for a moment. "If it is a big statement, then a Big Person must have made it. Perhaps it was a Heffelump?"

"...Or a Woozle," said Eeyore, walking from behind the Facebook Comment.

"Oh hello, Eeyore," said Pooh.

"I don't know what's so depressing about this place," Eeyore replied, ignoring Pooh's cheerful greeting. "Always seems a little too cheerful for me."

"Perhaps we should go ask Christopher Robin about who made the Big Facebook Comment," said Pooh after a Thoughtful Moment.

"Silly old bear," said Christopher Robin after being presented with the problem. "It wasn't a Heffelump nor a Woozle; it was the Sister of the Writer."

Pooh and his friends looked toward the page. "Oh hello," said Pooh. Piglet peaked out from behind his fluffy friend.

"Now let us go inside, and I shall read you a story," said Christopher Robin.

"And might I have just a smackerel of your Story-Time Hunny, Christopher?" asked Pooh, trying to speak louder than the grumbling in his stomach.

"Silly old bear," said Christopher Robin as he led his friends into the house for a story.

And THAT is why the books will always be better than the Disney versions!

Paul Bryant: Winnie-the-Pooh, mild of my life, hearth of my loins. My sin, my soul. Win-knee-the-Pooh: the end of the lip taking a visit of 3 steps down the palate to come at 4 to kiss : Pooh. He used to be Pooh, undeniable Pooh, within the morning, status eighteen inches in a single sock. He was once that scruffy previous endure at school. He used to be Mr Winnie Pooh at the dotted line. yet in my hands he used to be continuously Bear.

Kathryn: First sentence: this is Edward Bear, coming downstairs now, bump, bump, bump, at the again of his head, in the back of Christopher Robin. Favorite quote: "When you get up within the morning, Pooh," acknowledged Piglet at last, "what's first thing you are saying to yourself?" "What's for breakfast?" acknowledged Pooh. "What do you say, Piglet?" "I say, i ponder what is going to take place intriguing today?" stated Piglet. Pooh nodded thoughtfully. "It's an analogous thing," he said. Just a superbly pride ebook to learn on a Sunday afternoon. I enjoyed each page.

Jeffrey: in case you have not learn Milne, and that i do not care what age you're otherwise you highbrow or socioeconomic status, learn the-Pooh. i like the-Pooh. he is so Seussian, so Andersenian, so Barriean, so Brownian, so . . . You get the point. for those who don't desire to learn those stories, learn them for your kids. would not have kids? learn them for your nieces and nephews. None of them? seize a child at the street, take a seat 'em down and read. simply verify you've gotten mother or dad's permission. No prison sentences, please. Enjoy!
