Insightful reviews

Mey Sandrasigaran: I feel somewhat sorry for the lead character. Maybe she would've been better off not married instead getting herself trapped in an arranged marriage to a complete stranger?

Judy Nesbit: Thought -provoking novel which examines the loneliness of an immigrant and the impact of the East-West cultural difference on one particular woman. Perhaps tries to include too many themes in the second half but a very enjoyable read.

Nitya Sivasubramanian: I grabbed this book off my mother's shelf because of how strongly I empathized with the main character described on the back blurb. After all, Nina is a smart well-read young woman who is told repeatedly how close she is to the end of her "marriageable girl" shelf life. Unfortunately, as I began to learn more about Nina's life, especially after her marriage, I realized how little I cared for a woman without the self-confidence and independence to deal with the struggles of settling into a brand new life in a brand new country. Granted, unlike Nina, and I suppose many of the other young immigrant wives I meet, I moved to the US with an American education and the confidence that my parents would not be shocked or heartbroken with any decision I could prove to them I had made carefully. But in the end, her inability to face up to reality and deal with tough situations head on really turned me off and made getting through the last third of the book incredibly strenuous. So, although I think the book is well-written, it's just didn't do it for me.

Amruta Joshi: it's reliable book, which offers with many stuff relating to overdue marriage, how existence isn't the same as courtship to marriage existence via Nina n Ananda's life. The lifetime of immigrant and strain to regulate with new kingdom and non-stop to join new state 's life. It additionally displays consistent struggle among brain n heart. It additionally bargains with sex, affairs and in addition to emotional bonding among major characters and their bonding with different characters. Along the with every one switch of season depicts the behaviorally alterations that during major characters Life.. Author has used uncomplicated n precise issues every one immigrant is going via it

Indiabookstore: Edgy and having a true perspective, Manju Kapur pulls off a queer mix of complexities of an immigrant and sexual deprivation and desire, however, with flaws. Nevertheless, the saga is winning in projecting the contours of woman sexuality and is ready to spotlight the clean issues of an prepared marriage. learn more: <http://www.indiabookstore.net/bookish...>

Jessica: The Immigrant is a ebook approximately those that don't appear to healthy into 'normal' Indian society yet are by some means in a position to evolve extra into their dermis after they immigrate to Canada. Ananda trains overseas to turn into a dentist after which makes a decision to take an Indian spouse after assuming somebody from 'home' may have reduce expectancies of him sexually-speaking. Nina is the 30-something still-on-the-shelf unmarried Indian lady residing at domestic along with her widowed mother. whilst Ananda's notion comes her way, the comfort of getting a safe lifestyles in a foreign country appeals, even though it triggers a tremendous wave of homesickness. Ironically, as they develop apart, either humans start to become aware of their person selves instead of the lives they pretended to stay for the sake in their households expectations. the easiest factor in regards to the ebook is Kapur's shooting of the Indian immigrant's sensibilities, challenges, ideals and method of life. A quote that stayed with me was, "Perhaps that was once the last word immigrant experience. no longer that anyone factor was once regular adequate to connect your self to for the remainder of your life, yet that you simply came across other ways to belong, methods no inevitably lasting, yet ones that made your trip much less lonely for awhile. while whatever failed it was once a sign to maneuver on. For an immigrant there has been no going back."There have been issues I completely hated concerning the publication though. One was once the consistent typo that doggedly haunted virtually each web page of the publication – Nina's mother, Mrs. Batra, was once typed up as Mr. Batra. the opposite soreness was once Kapur's incessant change among Ananda's and Nina's issues of view and 3rd individual narration. It had to be consistent.
