Insightful reviews

Barbara Andrews: I love short stories and I love real thrillers and scary stories but I read a very broad mix of genres. I was excited when I saw this and thought it would be good but I was VERY disappointed. The stories didn't paint good sight pictures, didn't draw me in as a reader. It was a dull read to me the characters lacked depth. I won't be reading the others.

Monty: Some of the stories in this book were terrific, and one deserved a five rating. Others (the minority) fell flat and deserve a one or two rating. So the three rating here is merely an average. If you decide to read this book, I recommend starting from the back because it's some of the earlier ones that aren't so good.

Rebecca: After reading the first and third in this series I was excited to read this one. I was also very glad to see that each story was going to be a new original story and not using characters from well-known books written by the authors.

I quite enjoyed Clive Cussler's commentary it was interesting and didn't drag out. It told me a little bit of background that I found quite interesting.

The stories were a mixture of great and not so great. I did enjoy the large majority of the stories and some of them were so good. There were quite a lot that had me hanging on to every word and I could picture them in my mind really well.

Overall, I really enjoyed reading the Thriller 2 anthology and thought it was worth a read.

Kersten: I learn this to work out if i'll locate any new authors to read. It being a suite of brief stories, a few of them felt a piece rushed. a number of the tales that I did get pleasure from have been Mariah Stewart's "Justice Served," Lisa Jackson's "Vintage Death," Gary Braver's "Ghostwriter," Joan Johnston's "Watch Out for My Girl," Jon Land's "Killing Time," and Ridley Pearson's "Boldt's damaged Angel."

John Durden: Too many amazing shorts during this book, although there's one particularly that I have to mention, since it helped with the advance of my very own novel, Melatonin. His identify is Gary Braver and the story, Ghost Writer, is really thrilling, because it may still be.

Carlissa: I bought a unfastened brief tale from this selection of brief tales from Audible.com. the tale I listened to used to be classic loss of life via Lisa Jackson and narrated by way of Tanya Eby Sirois. it's not that I am keen on brief stories, yet this one wasn't too bad. I actually did not take care of the narrator though.
