Description

In a not-too-distant future London, Tony Ling's a Zen gangster. Rosi Blades is a bored camgirl. They've never met, but this unlikely pair is about to embark on the chase of a lifetime through the crowded streets of the city. Rosi walks through the streets of London, broadcasting everything she sees to the internet, looking for trouble to help boost her online hit count . . . and it's trouble she finds when a runaway gangster zooms past her, chased by Tony. Tony's after a stolen briefcase, and soon Rosi finds herself caught up in a war between these gangsters as the hunted flees the hunter. But what's in the case the gangster stole from Tony . . . and was it really stolen?

Insightful reviews

Wolverina: Hilarious, creative, with amazing art and a beautifully 'punked' alternative London. Plus excessive amounts of toilet humor and swearing. Warren Ellis and Amanda Conner are a brilliant creative combination of gutterwank.

Brendan: When a mercenary gangster and a bored "camera girl" accidentally bump into one another on the streets of a futuristic London, all chaos breaks loose for a romping ride through the city. While the comic teems with funny ideas (as with the part of Chinatown where dudes in suits are shooting at one another all the time amid flocks of doves), the characters and the story never really come together for me. I also found the depiction of Rosi Blades, the girl who makes her living streaming her life and adventures 24hours a day, too exploitative without compensating for it with an interesting character.

Jarlos: a VERY oddball and original and just bugnuts crazy world is created in this book but is easily inviting without over-explanation because Ellis and Conner and Palmiotti know what they're doing. they are also having a lot of fun. it takes a lot of balls (pun intended) to tell a story of two people on the run from a gang of midgets who want a stolen penis back. it's light entertainment, but its humor, style and genuine charm that elevate the material into an ultimately cute love story.

Elizabeth: Tony Bling is a zen-reading gangster and Camgirl documents the entire wild motion round her in London - and is bored to the purpose of suicide. Tony resembles a standard Warren Ellis protagonist: floppy hair (dark this time), swimsuit and tie, cigarette, wise-cracks. they arrive up opposed to different gangsters out for blood, and a car-raping thup. plenty of motion here, none of it very serious, none of it something Warren Ellis could not write in his sleep.

Centauri: certainly a fascinating tackle london gangs and the future, yet, not anything fairly too impressive at all. enjoyable and quick-paced tale. NO capes or mask or tights (superhero tights that is). only a ridiculous enjoyable tale
